Habitat

Cefn Yr Hendy has three small, but beautiful ancient woodlands, once used for iron ore mining and limestone quarrying. They are recovered by nature. Home to a wonderful limestone flora with just hollows and hummocks as reminders of an industrial past. Sensitive management of diseased ash trees, retaining deadwood and preventing litter and garden rubbish are important management priorities.

When to Visit

In early spring enjoy the wildflowers and bird song and on summer evenings watch bats as they hunt for moths. In the autumn look for fungi, and in the winter enjoy the still beauty and follow goldcrests, long-tailed, blue and great tits foraging in the leafless trees.

Flora & Fauna

The limestone woodlands have tall beech and ash trees, hazel coppice, dogwood and spindle. An outstanding ground flora includes carpets of bluebells, primrose, wood anemone, violets and ramsons. The parasitic toothwort grows at the base of old hazel bushes and a rich fern flora includes beautiful soft shield ferns and giant male ferns. Although not found yet, the old hazel coppice area might just support dormice, look out for the distinctively opened hazel nuts!
